Dodd, Brown & Co., marks a new era in when uttering his maledictions—he would not dare to cross the confines of a Southern State. There is not living a man who has misrepresented Southern people more grossly, or done more to embitter the South against himself, and yet he would be listened to everywhere, and never insulted or wronged. We would gladly have the ferocious exponent of most progressive Readinglian trayers the have the ferocious exponent of most rapid growth and expansion; other cities progressive Radicalism traverse the taking advantage of our misfortune South. His honesty and versciousness would thus be subjected to the crucial test, and when he returned to the Senate Chamber we would know
